By this ingenious combination your correspondent plausibly seeks to persuade others that the annual tribute obtained from our industries by the treasury of the United States is much less than it really was last year or ever can be again. My own estimate of $800,000 was suggested to me by business men, one of whom claims to have paid $60,000 at least in duties at San Francisco, and I confess that I relied a little too much upon the United States customs system which was in force at the time of the last abortive efforts to obtain reciprocity.
